THE CHRISTIAN'S USE OF HIS BIBLE

LESSON TEXT—Deut. 6:4-9; II Tim. 3:14-17.

GOLDEN TEXT—Thy word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Best Book in the World.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Studying our March Orders.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Read and Study the Bible.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How to Get Help From the Bible.

I. God's Instructions to Israel Concerning the Use of the Scriptures (Deut. 6:4-9).

1. The central truths to be taught (vv. 4, 5).
 - (1) The unity of God (v. 4).
"The Lord our God is one Lord." This was a testimony against the polytheism existing among the Gentiles at that day.
 - (2) Man's supreme obligation (v. 5).
"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, soul and might." God should be loved with all the heart, soul and might because He is the alone and supreme God. This belief the first and great commandment, we know what is man's supreme duty.
 2. How these truths are to be kept alive (vv. 6-9).
"These words which I command thee this day shall be in thine heart." In order that God's Word might be in the heart they were enjoined—
 - (1) To teach them diligently unto thy children (v. 7).
 - The most important part of a child's education is that given in the home—the Word of God.
 - (2) "Shall talk of them when thou sittest in thine house" (v. 7).
 - This is the right kind of home life.
 - (3) Shall talk of them when walking with our children and friends (v. 7).
 - What more interesting, important and uplifting topic upon which to converse with our friends.
 - (4) Shall talk of them when retiring for the night (v. 7).
 - The last thing upon which the mind should rest before going to sleep should be God and His truth.
 - (5) Talk of them when rising in the morning (v. 7).
 - "How fitting that God should speak to us through His Word the first thing when we awake.
 - (6) "Bind them upon thine hands for a sign" (v. 8).
 - This was literally done by the Jews as portions of the Scriptures were worn upon their wrists.
 - (7) "They shall be as frontlets between thine eyes" (v. 8).
 - This also was literally done by the Jews even to wearing portions of the Scriptures in little boxes between eyes.
 - (8) "Thou shalt write them on the posts of thy house and on thy gates" (v. 9). They were to be constantly before their eyes.

II. Paul's Instruction to Timothy as to the Scriptures (II Tim. 3:14-17).

In this chapter Paul makes clear to Timothy that perilous times would come. False teachers would arise within the church and lead astray sentimental and unsuspecting people as neurotic women. People professing godliness would deny His power by godless living. So awful was this condition be that those who live godly lives shall suffer persecution. Paul's own life of suffering was an example of what fidelity and testimony would bring. In the last days he predicted that this attitude on the part of these false teachers would be intensified for "evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse."

In the face of such trying circumstances Paul exhorts Timothy—

1. To remain steadfast, to abide in the eternal truths which had been taught to him (v. 14).
He assures him that though trying times would come and violent storms of opposition would beat heavily upon him, Timothy would find the Word of God an abiding, unshaken foundation. The Holy Scriptures will abide even when heaven and earth have passed away; therefore the necessary thing is to abide in them.
2. The knowledge furnished by the Word of God was sufficient for the perplexing and trying times through which he was to pass (v. 15). The Bible furnishes wisdom which can be found in no other place. This wisdom, as all true wisdom, leads straight to Jesus Christ, who gives salvation.
3. The Scriptures are inspired of God (v. 16).
Inspiration here means "God-breathed." Because of this fact the Bible should be held with confidence.
- Abiding in the Scriptures will perfectly equip the minister for his work (v. 17).

How Jesus Saw Men

Jesus divided men into two classes; and no more; either on the narrow or on the broad way; either a good tree or a bad tree; either a wise or a foolish builder; in a word, either for Christ or against Him.—Plummer.

Service

The quality of the service is the measure of the result. It is not length of service, but intensity, sincerity, enthusiasm that tells.—B. J. Campbell.

GREAT NORTHERN CALENDAR

It is made of the beautiful half tone pictures used on the covers of the Northern for the past twelve months. It is nicely printed and of convenient size. The pictures and months are as follows:

Breaking Out the Road—January.
Seaboard Farm House—February.
View from Kineo Boarding House—March.
Sluicing Through the Dam—April.
Felling Up Steep Slope—May.
Ripogonous Gorge—June.
Barestone Mountain and Onawa Lake—July.
The Lobster Mountain Fire—August.
Moonlight on Togue Bend—September.
Ripogonous Dam—October.
Pittston Farm—November.
A Winter Scene—December.

The printing is of the best and the art work and effect is out of the usual. On the outside is a lumberman's home in the shadow of Mount Katahdin. The inscription: "Merry Christmas to the Employees of the Spruce Woods Department of the Great Northern Paper Company."

May the spirit of this holy festival abide in your hearts, bring peace and happiness and divine content, and may the New Year contain the realization of your dearest dreams and a kindly answer to your every prayer.

It is one of the many nice samples of fine printing that comes from the Augusta Press over which Roy Flynn has control.

The Old Pottle Tomb

By Frederick Marshall Davis

"Come, wake up here, you have slept long enough," were the words spoken one day recently by George Pike, who just sealed the stone wall and stuffed along the chimney and almost stood at the portals of the Pottle Tomb which, perhaps, two miles from Norway, Maine, and at the same time, beating heavily against the inner door, using his foot for a lever and with the great strength he possessed, the door was soon opened and a ray of light shot in that brought the frames of those who had prepared for themselves a last resting place, nearly to our view.

I had already worked my way and stood inside with others to gaze on this unusual sight that lay before our eyes. The entering the tomb was plain to me that the passing years were not wholly to blame for the conditions there as we find them today.

The amount of bones indicated to me that no less than one hundred and thirty human bones comprised the lot and four human skulls were plainly visible.

I stood and gazed with others at the perfect form or frame of a man of large stature that lay where he was left a good many years ago.

Parts of the case or casket lay scattered about the room and the four skulls and large collection of human bones lay in piles only brought to mind bits of weird stories or tales that we have heard or read that seem almost unbelievable.

One of the skulls seems to have gotten separated from the others and had been lying in a place just at the right of the long stranger, who, by some thought, less person, the casket had been opened and torn apart sufficient to lay bare or expose a human frame that lay clearly to our view.

Bits of the clothing were still prominent and I noticed that the man when living was no less than six feet tall and of large proportions. The tomb was not a day's journey from two separate apartments and the distribution of the numberless bones tell in their own way that they have been handled and shifted about by human hands, the perfect frame being left where it was laid in the bottom of the outer case or box, the casket having been partly decayed and lifted apart and resting in different parts of the room was a scene rarely to be remembered.

The tomb just mentioned was built and stands on a small plot of land owned by the Pottle heirs and joins the farm of George Pike, the home place where he now lives. Different from the others of this kind, it stands secluded; it stands in a lonely spot, heavily wooded; no other grave or church-yard being near to add to the gloom. The tomb, although situated in a place where it is not to be seen, still maintains its good form but like the skeleton that lies within, is sure to crumble and like all earthly things, plays its part in the changing world and passes on to the hands of some thoughtless person had shattered the outer door with a heavy charge of gun-shot and the conditions as they were today, is only a lesson in the way of the future.

I was invited that day to the home of Mr. Pike, the place where he has lived the past years. His wife, who is now married to Miss Agnes French, one sister being the wife of Bion Pike of Pike Hill, is a school teacher of note and is well known as a mathematician.

"The Elms" was a comfortable place, Mr. Pike said, as he pulled a chair forward and at the same time, raised a stove-poker, to strike me with it, not that, but instead, to poke his friendly friend.

The whole affair was a calamity; a wicked thing. The full truth may not be published for fifty years. Meanwhile there is no gain in blinding ourselves to the facts as now attainable.

In the line of definitions, there's nothing much better than this, "A pessimist is a fellow who has had too many transactions with an optimist."

Accepted and Real Truth

The World War from a Different Viewpoint

—J. Kazbek—

The views so ably expressed by C. F. Whitman, in his writings about the World War; what led up to it, and the reason why the United States took an active part in it, are interesting because they undoubtedly coincide with the established convictions of a considerable number of persons.

In order to get a correct view of anything as stupendous as this it is necessary to stand at a considerable distance from it. And, furthermore, it is essential that one divest himself from everything that will interfere with his vision and understanding.

It is an undoubted fact that this devastating and wicked conflict had its conception in commercial greed. Germany was sitting pretty, to speak in the vernacular. It was in a prosperous condition, had no cause to desire military conflict, did not desire war. Its factories were busy, its commerce with the world was satisfactory and it was increasing in a way that was marvelous. In every store in America were goods bearing the imprint "Made in Germany."

At one time supreme in its ability to produce and market its wares, became alarmed at the inroads made by German goods. Time, the referee of all things human, was marking the count; something had to be done—War was that something.

France, sore over its defeat by Germany, and the indemnity that it was forced to pay, and desiring recovery of the territory it had lost, was ready and eager to pounce upon Germany—if it could do so with safety.

This writer has it from what seems to be competent and unbiased authority that the British navy was ordered to sail under steam, ready for instant action, weeks before war began. It is also a well known fact that the French troops were mobilized at the same identical time, before the war began, and the lines of transit and the hotels of Paris, as is vouched for by American physicians and surgeons who were in Paris at that time for the purpose of attendance at a medical congress.

It is pertinent to ask "Why this English and French naval and military activity BEFORE Germany had made a move?" If Germany were the aggressor, if it had desired and contemplated making an attack upon the other nations, "could it have sent out scouts to warn these nations?" The answer seems plain.

Neither is there any doubt that it knew practically what was going on in the various countries of the world. That it made mistakes, there is also no doubt. The Kaiser was a vain man; but he was beloved by his people. Of this there is no doubt. And when a deposed and defeated king or other ruler can retain even the vestige of loyalty that is the Kaiser's today it is evidence that he was loved and beloved when in power.

The loss of the Lusitania was a sad event in English ship, carrying contraband of war, and as such was subject to attack. But if one will recall the advertisements published in the principal newspapers of the United States, warning people not to embark on this ship, that it was liable to be destroyed, he will at least acknowledge that Germany did what it could to avoid the loss of American lives. The Lusitania was a standard household name. Elbert Hubbard and his wife, both of whom perished in this disaster, called at this writer's home in New York five days prior to sailing. They were urged not to sail; but the warning was not heeded.

The United States entered the war for two reasons: Our money-lenders, munition makers and great corporations had sent money and merchandise to the warring countries in vast sums and stupendous amounts. If Germany should be allowed to win, the return of this money and payment for this merchandise would be long deferred, probably never paid. Hence the demand for our entrance into the conflict. President Wilson dreamed of impossible things, hence he was easily persuaded.

The whole affair was a calamity; a wicked thing. The full truth may not be published for fifty years. Meanwhile there is no gain in blinding ourselves to the facts as now attainable.

In the line of definitions, there's nothing much better than this, "A pessimist is a fellow who has had too many transactions with an optimist."

Coffin Arrested

An action before Commissioner Cleveland is related to the wholesale automobile thefts in Massachusetts the cars being disposed of at agencies in Maine and New Hampshire. United States Marshal Deley H. Phillips arrested Frank E. Coffin of Berlin, N. H. Coffin has been running garages at Berlin and Woodville and it is alleged he received stolen cars from Baldwin or Boardman. He was charged by the government with violation of federal traffic. The Commissioner placed his bonds at $3000 and on Coffin's failure to secure them he was taken to Concord by the United States Marshal Phillips for appearance before Judge Morris for an order for removal to Massachusetts for trial.
